Special Education Curriculum Guidelines
The general Religious Education curriculum identifies relevant learning opportunities that are suitable for children with mild general learning disabilities. However, it is envisaged that teachers will engage in a planning process and adapt and interpret the curriculum guidelines to take account of the diversity in aptitudes and interests among these students. They are likely to adopt a similar approach in teaching the other subjects in the curriculum.

There is a group of students – those with low incidence disabilities – including those with moderate, severe and profound general learning disabilities who have very individual learning needs. The special Religious Education curriculum is aimed at meeting the needs of these students.

These guidelines deal with presenting meaningful religious experiences for young people at the foundation stages of learning. The needs of these students can be varied and complex. Lessons for these young people need to take account of their strengths and interests. Active participation needs to be encouraged in the learning process.

The Curriculum Guidelines for teachers of students with mild, moderate, severe and profound general learning disabilities (NCCA, 2007) provide interesting strategies for teachers to use when working with this group of students. However, in keeping with the NCCA aims, where it is stated that their educational experience should reflect what is available to their peers, teachers are encouraged to plan and find a suitable entry point for each student. Teachers can also revisit various themes and incorporate a different and more age-appropriate range of materials that take account of the maturity of older students.

Guided by the approach taken by the NCCA Curriculum content is presented in three bands (NCCA, 2007):

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Attending Band</th>
<th>Responding Band</th>
<th>Initiating Band</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>This band is suitable for students who are in the very early stages of awareness of their immediate environment.</td>
<td>This band is suitable for those young people who appear to show interest in their environment but who still need adult prompting and guidance.</td>
<td>This band is suitable for students who are beginning to take control of their own environment, develop curiosity and initiate activities and communication.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

The bands above are designed to provide a framework within which teachers can identify the level of functioning of young people and to structure learning activities that take account of these levels. Age appropriate opportunities should be a consideration of teachers when planning material and resources.

While these students may have complex learning needs it is important that the learning experience that they receive in religious education matches that afforded to their peers without disabilities.
Students at the early stages of learning may begin to explore the world of religion in terms of special people, books, times, places and objects and by visiting their local church. They will listen to and talk on various religious stories. They will be introduced to religious signs, symbols and words. They will experience a number of religious celebrations and practices. They may reflect on the wonders of God’s world.

Curriculum Planning

The introduction to the Primary School Curriculum (NCCA, 1999) reminds schools that a continuing process of reflection, self-evaluation, review and innovation is necessary to realise the optimum learning experience for all students and in particular for those with special educational needs. Many students with SEN have very individualised learning needs. Religious education provides opportunities where teachers can structure individual lessons but as a subject it also lends itself quite readily to the promotion of group activities.

Choosing and Using Resources

It is important that the teacher collects a range of items and materials for lessons. These are likely to:
- Arouse interest
- Evoke pleasure
- Elicit curiosity and surprise
- Provide pleasurable experiences
- Provide opportunities for communication
- Promote an awareness of sharing with others
- Provide opportunities to explore the good things that God has given us to enjoy in this world.

The children are helped in lessons to realise that the world is full of beautiful things for them to enjoy. They are therefore helped to smell flowers, spices, scents of different kinds. They are helped to touch objects of different texture. They are assisted to look at objects of different colour. The children are helped to realise that certain colours and objects are associated with special occasions and feasts throughout the year. The children are given the opportunity to listen to music, different sounds and to respond accordingly. Foster a sense of delight among the students in all of the beautiful things that they come across in this world.

The children are given a clear message in lessons that God has given us many nice things in this world and that he wants us to enjoy and explore them. He has given these things to us because he loves us and he wants us to be happy.

Provide opportunities for the children to see objects associated with worship such as candles, altar cloth, crucifix and incense. They are also helped to realise that many of the stories that are read to them come from the Bible. These objects are given a special place in the classroom and the children are helped to regard them with reverence.

The children are introduced to key words and imagery used to describe God through speech, sign, symbol and gesture. The students are provided with an opportunity to listen to and participate in stories that demonstrate that God loves them.
Meeting for Worship
The children are encouraged to experience different forms of worship in an educational context. Class or whole school assemblies should be used for this purpose. Regular visits to the church should be facilitated. Prayer and worship can take many forms: meditation, listening to God’s word, giving praise, giving thanks, saying sorry, prayer through drama, dance, movement and song. Different forms of worship used on a regular basis allow for a meaningful spiritual experience for the children.
